

Married Vs Single life WHO HAS IT BETTER?

Prashant Subedi
Managing Director, Vatsalya

I think the significance of staying single or being married varies in different phases of life. People definitely wish for companionship at some stage of life, however, not at the cost of their freedom. I believe single people are more resilient and determined. They have less relationship obligations so they can concentrate more on their own fulfilment and betterment. Currently my work demands a lot of time and attention and I may not be able to focus much on my family life. While having a partner could mean a lot of emotional support but it is also an added responsibility which I may not be able to give my full dedication to. So, given the present work schedules and career responsibilities, I feel being single is more favourable for me than to be married. However I definitely see myself married in a few years time.
